

AUSTRALIAN AWARDS
FOR UNIVERSITY TEACHING

NEWSLETTER #8

2 November 2020

Dear Colleagues

After fifteen weeks of lockdown, Melburnians are finally enjoying an easing of restrictions. People are now able to leave their home for any reason, though still required to wear a face mask in public. It is pleasing to see cafes, restaurants, pubs and bars reopen.

In this newsletter, we can confirm that the Australian Award for University Teaching will run again next year. We encourage you to start contacting potential applicants so they can start preparing for their 2021 submission.

We are also well into the assessment process, with assessors completing their individual assessments before we move into the collaborative assessment phase. We are working towards formally announcing the recipients list on the Wednesday 24th February 2021.

I would also like to take this opportunity to thank those ICOs who have taken the time to complete the evaluation survey. We are currently analysing the feedback which will help us improve the AAUT awards scheme in its next iteration.

Finally, with my move to RMIT University as Associate Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Learning and Teaching), College of Science, Engineering and Health, the Awards Team will also be moving with me. They are currently busy making all the necessary arrangement to ensure a smooth transition. In the meantime, it is still business as usual, and we'll keep you posted with further developments.

Regards
-Angela

AUSTRALIAN AWARDS FOR UNIVERSITY TEACHING

Although universities are being regularly affected by the great COVID-19 epidemic, the government recognizes the role that it has in our communities, including our students, and supports the members of the faculty and staff who are working hard to ensure that our students receive the best possible education.

As a result, the universities work of our students who are facing major challenges in their studies and living in such a stressful world. The award winners (AAUT) have developed a system to offer a reward scheme in 2021. This will ensure that the members of the academic staff will go forward, the knowledge that official recognition for the efforts they have made to ensure that our students are in a safe and secure environment.

ABOUT AAUT

The Australian Awards for University Teaching (AAUT) were established in 1997 by the Australian Government to celebrate and reward exceptional university teaching. Since then, the Awards have become a central part of recognition for university educators nationwide.

The AAUT recognizes the impact that outstanding teachers have on the learning and teaching experience of students in higher education. The awards are based on a rigorous and peer-reviewed process that supports students and enables teaching. The process is designed to identify and reward the best of higher education. Teachers, with the support of their students, contribute to positive change in learning and teaching through the ongoing sharing and dissemination of knowledge. The award then acts as a catalyst for continuing and developing excellence in learning and teaching.
